

The Electronic Manipulus florum Project
www.manipulusflorum.com

Annotated Bibliography compiled by C. Nighman citing scholarship that has employed and/or cited the online edition of Manipulus florum, listed in chronological order

(last updated on 23 January 2025, with 108 titles)

Chris L. Nighman (2002). “The Electronic Manipulus florum Project,” Medieval Sermon Studies 46, 97-9.

A research note announcing the launch of the online project and explaining its goals.

Francisco J. Hernández (2003). “La hora de don Rodrigo,” Cahiers de linguistique et de civilisation hispaniques médiévales 26, 15-72.

This author is the earliest known user of the Electronic Manipulus florum Project, which enabled him to identify a quotation from Augustine (cf. Restitutio b) in a letter dated to 1277, acknowledged as follows: “Agredenzeo...generoso editor del Manipulus florum en la red (www.manipulusflorum.com), la amabilidad con que me ha guiado hacia la Fuente” (p.49, n.25).

Chris L. Nighman (2005). “Commonplaces on preaching among commonplaces for preaching? The topic Predicacio in Thomas of Ireland’s Manipulus florum,” Medieval Sermon Studies 49, 37-57. (https://scholars.wlu.ca/hist_faculty/27/)

Argues that the Manipulus was intended for university students as a resource for self-formation, rather than an anthology for composing sermons, as argued by the Rouses; includes an edition of the lemma Predicacio.

Matthew Steggle (2005). “The Manipulus florum in An Almond for a Parrat,” Notes and Queries 52.2, 178-82.

Matthew Steggle (2006). “The Manipulus florum in The Anatomie of Absurditie,” Notes and Queries 53.1, 43-6.

Demonstrates the reception of the Manipulus by Thomas Nashe, a late 16th-century English polemicist, in composing these two tracts, drawing especially from the lemma “Mulier”.

Christine Boyer (2006). “Un témoin précoce de la réception du «Manipulus florum» au début du XIVe siècle: le recueil de sermons du dominicain Guillaume de Sauqueville,” Bibliothèque de l’École des Chartes 164.1, 43-70.

(https://www.persee.fr/doc/bec_0373-6237_2006_num_164_1_463657)

Discusses de Sauqueville’s early reception of the Manipulus as a preaching aid.

Chris L. Nighman (2006). “Prudencia, plague and the pulpit: Richard Fleming’s eulogy for Robert Hallum at the Council of Constance,” Annuarium Historiae Conciliorum 38.1, 181-96. (http://scholars.wlu.ca/hist_faculty/8/)

Argues that Fleming employed his copy of the Manipulus (Oxford, Lincoln College MS 98) to revise and politicize an early version of this funeral sermon (pp.193-5).

Annabel Brett, trans. & ed. (2006). Marsilius of Padua, The Defender of the Peace, Cambridge University Press.

Cites Marsilius’ possible use of Inuidia o in the Manipulus for a quotation attributed to Huguccio of Pisa (p.141, n.4).

Christine Boyer (2007). “Les sermons de Guillaume de Sauqueville: l’activité d’un prédicateur dominicain à la fin du règne de Philippe le Bel,” Thèse de doctorat, Université Lumière, Lyon II.

Demonstrates this preacher’s extensive employment of the Manipulus at the beginning of the 14th century, soon after it was completed in 1306.

Nicholas Must (2007). “The reception of Thomas of Ireland’s Manipulus florum in Calvinist Geneva: sex and marriage in Jacob Stoer’s 1593 edition,” MA thesis, Wilfrid Laurier University. (<https://scholars.wlu.ca/etd/853/>)

Examines how the Manipulus was adapted by Stoer in the context of the Genevan Reformation, focusing especially on his alteration of Coniugium and creation of a new lemma: Adulterium.

Pedro Martín Baño (2007). “Frey Marcelo de Lebrija (1479?-1543), primigénito del Humanista Antonio de Nebrija: Ensayo bio-bibliográfico,” Revista de Estudios Extrameños 63.2, 617-54. (http://www.dip-badajoz.es/cultura/ceex/reex_digital/reex_LXIII/2007/T.%20LXIII%20n.%202%202007%20mayo-ag/RV001097.pdf)

Cites Nobilitas d in the Manipulus florum as the source for a quotation in a letter by Pedro de Estrada to Marcelo de Lebrija (p.653, n.57).

Constant Mews (2008). “Literary sources of Le Livre de Paix,” in Christine de Pizan, Book of Peace, K. Green, C. Mews & J. Pinder (eds.), Penn. State University Press.

Cites the Manipulus florum website in noting that Christine did not employ it in writing this text, unlike some of her other works, such as Othea (p.36, n.9).

James McEvoy (2009). “Flowers from ancient gardens: the lemma ‘Amicitia’ in the Manipulus florum of Thomas of Ireland,” in J. McEvoy & M. Dunne (eds.), The Irish Contribution to European Scholastic Thought, Four Courts Press, 60-73.

Discusses the construction of Amicicia and Inimicicia, providing English translations of all 95 quotations under Friendship from the online critical edition of the Manipulus, and supports Nighman’s 2005 revisionist theory regarding Thomas of Ireland’s intended audience.

Paweł Stępień (2009). “O wolności w średniowiecznej literaturze religijnej w Polsce,” in Humanitas i Christianitas w Kulturze Polskiej, M. Hanusiewicz-Lavalée (ed.), Warsaw, 15-52.

Cites a number of Manipulus florum quotations on the subjects of liberty and freedom (pp.20-4, 41), determined by employing the online edition of the Electronic Manipulus florum Project (p.51).

A.M. Aldama Roy & M.J. Muñoz Jiménez (2009). “Selección y manipulación de los autores clásicos en los florilegios latinos,” Selección, manipulación y uso metaliterario de los autores clásicos, Pórtico, Zaragoza 2009, 61-97.

Cites the Electronic Manipulus florum Project (p.68, n.13).

Alan Fletcher (2009). Late medieval popular preaching in Britain and Ireland: texts, studies, and interpretations, Sermo 5, Turnhout: Brepols.

Cites the Electronic Manipulus florum Project and Nighman’s 2005 article (p.25, n.43).

Pedro Martín Baño (2009). Las triacas de Marcelo de Lebrija (Triaca del alma; Triaca de amor; Triaca de tristes): Edición y estudio. San Millán de la Cogolla: CiLengua.

Cites the Electronic Manipulus florum Project in the bibliography (p.485) and for one quotation under Verecundia (p.363, n.2) and another under Nobilitas (p.471, n.1) in the edition of Triaca de Tristes.

Carol Wyvill (2010). “John Fewterer’s Myrrour or glasse of Christes passion: a partial edition with commentary,” PhD dissertation, Department of English and Linguistics, University of Otago, New Zealand.

Demonstrates Fewterer’s employment of the Manipulus for a number of quotations in this text.

Bernardino Fernando da Costa Marques (2010). “Mundividência Cristã no Sermonário de Frei Paio de Coimbra Edição Crítica da “Summa Sermonum de Festiuitatibus” Magistri Fratris Pelagii Parui Ordinis Praedicatorum A. D. 1250 Cod. Alc. 5/CXXX - B. N. de Lisboa,” Doctoral dissertation, Faculdade de Letras da Universidade de Coimbra.

Cites the Electronic Manipulus florum Project for Amicicia ck (p.20, n.94)

Maria José Muñoz Jiménez (2011). “Formas de coexistencia de autores y obras en los florilegios medievales,” in M.J. Muñoz Jiménez (ed.), El florilegio: espacio de encuentro de los autores antiguos y medievales, Fédération Internationale des Instituts d’Études Médiévales (Textes et Études du Moyen Âge 58), Oporto, 9-34.

Cites the Electronic Manipulus florum Project (p.22, n.26) and Nighman’s 2005 article in Medieval Sermon Studies (p.22, n.27).

Robert L.A. Clark & Pamela Sheingorn (2011). “Encountering a dream-vision: visual and verbal glosses to Guillaume de Digulleville’s Pelerinage Jhesucrist,” in Push me, pull you: imaginative, emotional, physical and spatial interaction in late medieval and renaissance art, S. Blick & L.D. Gelfand eds., Brill, 3-38.

Demonstrates that the Manipulus is the source for a number of marginal Latin glosses in several manuscript exemplars of this mid-14th century French devotional poem (p.7).

Ruth Finnegan (2011). Why do we Quote? The Culture and History of Quotation, Open Book Publishers, 132-6. (<http://www.openbookpublishers.com/reader/75>)

Discusses the Manipulus in the context of other collections of quotations, such as Erasmus’ Adagia, and provides an example of Thomas’ cross references from BnF MS lat. 15985 (p.134).

Andrew Kane & Frank Tompa (2011). “Janus: the intertextuality search engine for the Electronic Manipulus florum Project,” Literary and Linguistic Computing 26.4, 407-15.

A technical report on the development of the Janus search engine by its developers.

Jana Zachová, ed. (2011). Dicta de Tempore Magistro Iohanni Hus Attributa, Corpus Christianorum Continuatio Mediaevalis 239/239A, Turnhout: Brepols Publishers.

Cites the Electronic Manipulus florum Project in the Conspectus auctorum et editionum (vol. 239, p.lxix), and cites over 500 cases of the reception of this florilegium by the author of this text in the Index fontium (vol. 239A, pp.1578-89).

Carrie E. Beneš (2011). “Noble and most ancient: catalogues of city foundation in fourteenth-century Italy,” in Medieval manuscripts, their makers and users, A special issue of Viator in honour of Richard and Mary Rouse, Turnhout, Brepols, pp.193-217.

Cites the Electronic Manipulus florum Project (p.193, n.2).

Chris L. Nighman (2012). “The Janus intertextuality search engine: A research tool of (and for) the Electronic Manipulus florum Project,” Digital Medievalist 7. (<http://doi.org/10.16995/dm.43>)

Explains how the Janus search engine can be used both for determining the influence of the Manipulus on Latin texts written after 1306 and also the influence on the Manipulus of intermediate sources that Thomas of Ireland mined for quotations. Also argues that Swanson (1989) was incorrect in believing that John of Wales’ Communiloquentum was an intermediate source for the Manipulus, and suggests instead that the old tradition which claims that John of Wales started the Manipulus and Thomas of Ireland completed it may be correct.

M.J. Muñoz Jiménez, I.V. Fernández, & M.C. Trujillo (2012). “El concepto tolerantia en los florilegios medievales,” in Tolerancia: Teoría y práctica en la edad media, R.P. Rivas (ed.), Actas del Coloquio de Mendoza (15-18 de junio de 2011), FIDEM Textes et Études du Moyen Age 64 (Mendoza), 163-82.

Cites the Electronic Manipulus florum Project and reproduces Tolerancia c, f, h, r, u, ac, ag, and an from the online edition (pp.170-1).

Hanna O. Vincze (2012). The Politics of Translation and Transmission: Basilikon doron in Hungarian Political Thought, Cambridge Scholars Publishing.

Notes the extensive use by Pataki Füstis János (1600-29) of the 1567 Lyons edition of the Manipulus as a source in composing The Royal Mirror (pp.167-8, n.121).

Stephen A. Pelle (2012). “Continuity and renewal in English homiletic eschatology, ca. 1150-1200,” PhD thesis, Centre for Medieval Studies, University of Toronto.

Notes that variants in Prosperitas x from Prosper of Aquitaine’s Sententiae are also found in an English manuscript from the late 12th century (p.183).

Lorenza Tromboni (2012). “La presenza di florilegi aristotelici e testi encyclopedici nel De doctrina Aristotelis di Girolamo Savonarola,” Spicae: Cahiers de l’Atelier Vincent de Beauvais, n.s. 2, 143-61.

Mentions the Manipulus and describes the Electronic Manipulus florum Project (pp.146-7, n.9).

Stephanie Betty Jacob (2012). “Mittelalterliche Kommentierung zur Epistula Valerii Walter Maps,” PhD dissertation, Universität Köln.

Discusses Thomas of Ireland’s reception of Map’s misogynist text in the lemmata Coniugium and Mulier and cites the Electronic Manipulus florum Project (pp.59-62).

John R. Davies, Richard Sharpe & Simon Taylor (2012). “Comforting sentences from the warming room at Inchcolm Abbey,” Innes Review 63.2, 260-6.

Demonstrates that the Manipulus was the source of a Latin mural inscription in Scotland.

Susanne Kaup (2012). De beatitudinibus. Gerhard von Sterngassen OP und sein Beitrag zur spätmittelalterlichen Spiritualitätsgeschichte, Akademie Verlag, Berlin.

Cites many examples of Gerhard’s reception of the Manipulus in composing his Medela languentis anime and Pratum animarum at Köln in the early 14th century, referencing the Electronic Manipulus florum Project on p.18, p.158, n.2 & p.234, n.3; the Manipulus is cited as the source for dozens of quotations in the critical edition (pp.330-470), and its index (pp.473-82).

Samantha James (2013). “Cornelius Aurelius, the upcycling humanist: a study of the Libellus de patientia,” MA thesis, Tri-University Graduate Program in History, Wilfrid Laurier University (C. Nighman, supervisor).

Examines how the Manipulus was employed as an uncited source for a number of classical and patristic quotations in this early 16th-century humanist example of patience literature. Since 2019, the Latin text (edited by S. James, C. Nighman, and K. Tilmans) and the English translation of this tract (translated by James and Nighman), have been available online as Open Access resources via The Libellus de patientia Project (<http://web.wlu.ca/history/cnighman/Libellus/index.html>).

Tristan Sharp (2013). “William of Pagula’s Speculum religiosorum and its background: law, pastoral care, and religious formation for monks, c. 1215-c.1350,” PhD dissertation, Centre for Medieval Studies, University of Toronto.

Demonstrates William of Pagula’s reception of the Manipulus florum in this text.

Maria Teresa Callejas Berdonés (2013). “El Epitoma rei militaris de Vegecio en el Manipulus Florum,” in La compilación del saber en la Edad Media, M.J. Munoz, P. Cañizares, C. Martín (eds.), Fédération Internationale des Instituts d’Études Médiévales (Textes et Études du Moyen Âge 69), Porto, 115-29.

Examines Thomas of Ireland’s reception of Vegetius in various quotations under the lemmata Bellum and Milicia, and some non-military topics, including Consilium, Presumptio and Venia.

Maria José Muñoz Jiménez (2013). “El tópico Eloquencia en el Manipulus Florum de Tomás de Irlanda,” in Otivm cvm dignitate: Estudios en homenaje al profesor José Javier Iso Echegoyen, J.A. Beltrán et al. eds. (Monografías de Filología Latina, 16). Zaragoza, 569-77.

Discusses Thomas’ construction of ‘Eloquencia’, pointing out (p.572, n.4) that the original Latin source for Eloquencia x, a quotation attributed to Plato, is the Liber de elementis of Isaac Israeli ben Solomon (d.932), perhaps transmitted via John of Wales’s Compendiloquium.

Paweł Stępień (2013). “O problemach badania śladu autorskiego w kazaniu średniowiecznym na przykładzie Kazania na Narodzenie Pańskie z Kazań świętokrzyskich” [Problems of research on author’s mark in medieval sermon. An example of Sermon on the Nativity from The Holy Cross Sermons], in Kaznodziejstwo średniowieczne: Teksty, atrybucje, audytorium, Polska na tle Europy, [Medieval Preaching: Texts, Attributions, Audiences. Poland in European Context], K. Bracha (ed.), Warsaw, 107-24.

Cites the online edition of the Electronic Manipulus florum Project (p.116, n.28), for Peccatum r.

Brian J. Maxon (2014). The Humanist World of Renaissance Florence, New York: Cambridge U.P.

Argues that the apparent use of the Manipulus by Leonardo Dati in composing a sermon delivered at the Council of Constance suggests that he was merely a “dabbler” in Florentine humanism (pp.136-7; p.237, n.73).

Emily Dolmans (2014). “‘Hunting for souls’: a newly discovered Middle English lyric,” Notes and Queries 61.2, 185-7.

Notes (p.187, footnote #16) the similarity between a Latin marginal note that accompanies this vernacular lyric and Infernus o in the Manipulus, which is a paraphrase of a passage from Bernard.

Beatriz Antón (2014). “Emblemas-florilegios sobre la amistad en el Emblematum Liber (1593) de Jean Jacques Boissard,” Euphrosyne: Revista de Filología Clásica, n.s. 42, 135-54.

Examines the three emblems on Amicitia in Boissard’s Emblematum liber, noting that the source for the Latin passages is the lemma Amicicia in the Manipulus flororum, via Joseph Lang’s Polyanthea; cites the Electronic Manipulus flororum Project (p.139, n.21).

Marc Cels (2014 for 2012). “Anger in Thomas of Ireland’s Manipulus flororum and in five texts for preachers,” Florilegium 29, 147-70.

Compares the construction of Ira in the Manipulus to five medieval preaching resources, concluding that Nighman (2005) was correct in arguing that Thomas of Ireland intended his florilegium to be read by students at the Sorbonne, rather than as a resource for preachers.

Maria Teresa Callejas Berdonés (2014). “Juvenal en el manuscrito 246 de la Biblioteca Histórica de Santa Cruz de Valladolid,” in Manipulus studiorum: en recuerdo de la profesora Ana María Aldama Roy, Philologica: Publicaciones del departamento de philología Latina de la Universidad Complutense de Madrid, M.T. Callejas Berdonés et al. eds., Madrid, 157-71.

Cites the online edition of the Manipulus flororum for the lemma Exactio (p.166, n.23).

María José Muñoz Jiménez (2014). “Antologías renacentistas abreviadas en manuscritos de bibliotecas Españolas,” Fortunatae 25, 407-16.

Discusses the Manipulus as a major source (via Domenico’s Polyanthea) of the florilegium in Valladolid MS 246 (pp.411-13), citing Nighman’s 2005 article and the Electronic Manipulus flororum Project website (n. 10).

Monserrat Jiménez San Cristóbal (2014). “Maximiano en el manuscrito 246 de la Biblioteca Histórica de Santa Cruz de Valladolid,” in Manipulus studiorum: en recuerdo de la profesora Ana María Aldama Roy, Philologica: Publicaciones del departamento de philología Latina de la Universidad Complutense de Madrid, M.T. Callejas Berdonés et al. eds., Madrid, 547-61.

Discusses the Manipulus as a major source of the florilegium in Valladolid MS 246, citing the Electronic Manipulus flororum Project website as a resource used for this research (p.553, n.26).

Cecilia Medina López-Lucendo & Israel Villalba de la Güida (2014). “El florilegio temático del ms. 246 de la Biblioteca de Santa Cruz de Valladolid: Edición y comentario filológico del ‘título’ Fortitudo,” in Manipulus studiorum: en recuerdo de la profesora Ana María Aldama Roy, Philologica: Publicaciones del departamento de philología Latina de la Universidad Complutense de Madrid, M.T. Callejas Berdonés et al. eds., Madrid, 691-704.

Cites the online edition of the Manipulus (pp.697-701) in demonstrating that it was a major source for the topic Fortitudo in the Valladolid manuscript.

María José Muñoz Jiménez (2014). “Las fuentes del De variis doctorum sententiis de C. García Guillén de Paz,” in Manipulus studiorum: en recuerdo de la profesora Ana María Aldama Roy, Philologica: Publicaciones del departamento de philología Latina de la Universidad Complutense de Madrid, M.T. Callejas Berdonés et al. eds., Madrid, 755-64.

Cites the online edition of the Manipulus (p.757, n.4) in discussing the reception of this florilegium in the Valladolid manuscript.

Barry Taylor, ed. (2014). Libro del consejo e de los consejeros, Cilengua, San Millán de la Cogolla.

Identifies the Manipulus as a major source for the author (“Maestre Pedro”) of this tract (pp.28-9, 41, 50, 55-6, 58, 159, 161; and also cites (p.39, n.55) the digital transcription of John of Wales’ Communiloquentium (1475) that is linked to the Auxiliary Resources page in noting that it was also a major source for this text.

Mirko Breitenstein (2014). “The success of discipline: The reception of Hugh of St Victor’s De institutione novitiorum in the 13th and 14th centuries,” in Vita regularis. Rules and Observance. Devising forms of Communal Life, M. Breitenstein et al. (eds.), Ordnungen und Deutungen religiösen Lebens im Mittelalter 60, G. Melville et al. (eds.), Berlin, 183-222.

Cites the Electronic Manipulus florum website (p.217, n.170) in discussing quotations from Hugh’s De institutione under the lemmata Correctio, Disciplina, Exercitatio, and Verecundia (p.218).

Chris L. Nighman (2014). “The Manipulus florum, Johannes Nider’s Formicarius, and late medieval misogyny in the construction of witches prior to the Malleus maleficarum,” Journal of Medieval Latin 24, 171-84.

Demonstrates and analyses Johannes Nider’s reception of the Manipulus florum in composing book 5 of his Formicarius, a very influential text for the development of the gendered witch stereotype in the fifteenth century. It also examines the lemmata “Mulier” and “Coniugium” in the Manipulus, arguing that Thomas of Ireland’s construction of those topics was essentially misogamous, rather than misogynous, though its reception by Nider was informed by misogyny, bolstering Nighman’s revisionist theory on Thomas’s intended audience (Nighman, 2005).

Constant Mews & Tomas Zahora (2015). “Remembering last things and regulating behavior in the early fourteenth century: from the De consideratione novissimorum to the Speculum morale,” Speculum 90.4, 960-94.

Examines an extended version of a quotation from Bernard in Mors aq (p.975).

Margaret M. Gower (2015). “The heart of peace: Christine de Pizan and Christian theology,” PhD dissertation, Harvard University.

Cites the Electronic Manipulus florum Project in treating Christine’s reception of Scriptura sacra d (pp.7-8) and an unnamed quotation from Cor siue mens (p.89, n.83).

Maria José Muñoz Jiménez (2015). “Marcial en el manuscrito 246 de la Biblioteca de Santa Cruz de Valladolid,” in Humanismo y Pervivencia del Mundo Clásico V: Homenaje al profesor Juan Gil Fernández, Instituto de Estudios Humanísticos, Alcañiz (Teruel), 343-53.

Cites the Electronic Manipulus florum Project as an “edición electrónica muy útil” (p.346).

Nicole Smith (2015). “Middle English lyrics, Homo vide, and A Christian manne’s bileeve,” Notes and Queries n.s. 62.1, 17-22.

Cites the Manipulus florum Project website (p.19, n.12), noting that Passio ak is one of several sources that misattribute a Latin carol by Phillip the Chancellor to Bernard of Clairvaux.

Francesc Tous Prieto (2015). “Les collections de proverbis de Ramon Llull: estudi de conjunct i edició dels Mil proverbis i dels Proverbis d’ensenyament,” PhD dissertation, Universitat de Barcelona.

Cites the online edition of the Manipulus (p.212, n.67), and Nighman’s 2005 article (p.75, n.79).

William O. Duba (2015). “Auctoritates and Aristoteles in Peter Auriol,” in Les Auctoritates Aristotelis, leur utilisation et leur influence chez les auteurs médiévaux. État de la question 40 ans après la publication, J. Hamesse & J. Meirinhos (eds.), Textes et Etudes du Moyen Âge, 83 Fédération Internationale des Instituts d’Études Médiévales, Barcelona – Madrid, 155-86.

Cites the online edition for Amicicia bs (p.183, n.56) and Amicicia ce (pp.184-5) in discussing one of Auriol’s sermons.

Aaron Bolarinho (2015). “‘...tamquam civilis causa’ – The reception of Vegetius and Frontinus in Geremia da Montagnone’s Compendium moralium notabilium,” MA thesis, Wilfrid Laurier University (<https://scholars.wlu.ca/etd/1781/>).

Compares Montagnone’s reception of Vegetius’ Epitoma rei militaris in his proto-humanist florilegium (c.1310) to the contemporary reception of that author in Thomas of Ireland’s florilegium (passim).

María José Muñoz Jiménez (2015). “Los florilegios Latinos confeccionados en terreiros Hispánicos,” in Estudios de literatura medieval en la Península Ibérica, Instituto Literatura y Traducción 10, misc. 4, C. Alvar (ed.), San Millán de la Cogolla, 147-72.

Cites the online edition of the Manipulus (p.154, n.22) in discussing the importance of this florilegium and others in medieval manuscripts in Spain.

Eric Leland Saak, ed. (2015). Catechesis in the Later Middle Ages: The Exposition of the Lord's Prayer of Jordan of Quedlinburg, OESA (d.1380), Brill: Leiden.

Cites the online edition for Mundus s (p.360, n.30) and Prudencia siue prouidencia z (p.361, n.33), noting that the Manipulus was Jordan's likely source for both quotations.

Gabriel Silaga, ed. (2015). Magistri Iohannis Hus Postilla Adumbrata, Corpus Christianorum Continuatio Mediaeualis 261, Turnhout: Brepols Publishers.

Cites the Electronic Manipulus florum Project in the Bibliographie (p.xli), and cites over 4 cases of the reception of this florilegium in the Index auctorum (p.776).

Elke Zinsmeister, Jens Haustein, Martin Schubert eds. (2016). Otto von Passau, “Die vierundzwanzig Alten”, Editionsprinzipien und Editionstext, Arbeitsversion (http://dtm.bbaw.de/ovp-dateien/ovp_edition_vorlaeufig).

Cites 58 cases of apparent Manipulus florum reception in this mid-14th-century text. The critical edition currently provided online is a working version for the final printed edition of the text, which is expected in 2020; a digital edition is also planned.

Mirko Breitenstein (2016). “Das ‘Haus des Gewissens.’ Zur Konstruktion und Bedeutung innerer Räume im Religiosentum des hohen Mittelalters,” in Geist und Gestalt. Monastische Raumkonzepte als Ausdrucksformen religiöser Leitideen im Mittelalter, J. Sonntag et al. (eds.), Vita regularis. Ordnungen und Deutungen religiösen Lebens im Mittelalter 69, G. Melville et al. (eds.), Berlin, 19-55.

Cites Temptatio n (p.43, n.119) from the online edition, a passage from Gregory's Moralia in Job, in discussing the concept of conscience.

Antonio Volpato, ed. (2016-). Catarina da Siena, Lettere, <http://www.centrostudicateriniani.it/en/st-catherine-of-siena/writings>

These Open Access critical editions build upon Volpato's critical edition of St. Catherine of Siena's letters, published on CD-ROM in 2002. Although Catherine did not use the Manipulus florum herself, Volpato cites the online Manipulus florum edition for numerous common quotations to demonstrate that she drew from the same intellectual heritage as contemporary preachers of the late 14th century.

Kiss Farkas Gábor (2016). “Latin és népnyelv a késő középkori magyarországi domonkos kolostorokban” [Latin and vernacular language in medieval Dominican monasteries in Hungary], Irodalomtörténeti Közlemények 120.2, 225-47.

Cites Studium h from the online edition (p.238, n.68) as the source for a quotation attributed to Origen in Leonhard Huntpichler's Directio pedagogorum (15th cent.).

Bryan Deschamp, ed. (2016). Iohannis Soreth Expositio paraenetica in regylam Carmelitarvm, Corpus Christianorum Continuatio Mediaeualis 259, Turnhout: Brepols Publishers.

Cites the Electronic Manipulus florum Project in the Bibliography (p.lxxxii) and cites 18 cases of the reception of this florilegium by the author of this text in the Index fontium (pp.222-3).

Paolo Caboni (2017). “Engaños y desengaños del profano amor di Joseph Zatrilla y Vico: Edizione e studio,” PhD dissertation, Università degli Studi di Cagliari. (https://gredos.usal.es/jspui/bitstream/10366/135732/1/DLE_CaboniP_ProfanoAmor_VolumeI.pdf)

Notes the likely reception of the Manipulus florum, either directly or indirectly through Joseph Lang's Anthologia (1598), for a number of Latin passages in this 17th-century text, including Exemplum z (p.36, n.104), Ipocrisis a, l, o, ak (p.88, n.316), and a number of unspecified citations from Fides siue fidelitas, Homo, Libertas, and Seruitus (p.95, n.348), citing the Manipulus florum Project's online critical edition as being “enriched by various intertextual and hypertextual tools (“...arricchita da vari strumenti intertestuali e ipertestuali”: p.217). Additional citations may be included in the critical edition in vol.2 of the dissertation, which has not been seen.

R. Blumenfeld-Kosinski & E.J. Richards eds. & trans. (2017). Christine de Pizan, Othea's Letter to Hector. The Other Voice in Early Modern Europe: The Toronto Series 57 / Arizona Medieval and Renaissance Texts and Studies 521. Toronto: Iter Press / Tempe, AZ: Arizona Center for Medieval and Renaissance Studies.

The editors made extensive use of the online edition: “We have consistently consulted the original Latin of Thomas Hibernicus, Manipulus flororum at Chris L. Nighman’s website,” though the name of the website is mistakenly cited as “Digital Medievalist” (p.20, n.62; p.158).

Gregorio Rodríguez Herrera (2017). “Mujer y tradición clásica en los Ex Elegiis Tibulli, Propertii et Ouidii Selecti Versus (1504) de J. Murmelio,” Graeco-Latina Brunensis 22.2, 269-82.

(https://digilib.phil.muni.cz/bitstream/handle/11222.digilib/137636/1_GraecoLatinaBrunensis_22-2017-2_18.pdf?sequence=1)

In introducing his research, Rodríguez Herrera notes that our understanding of the influence of Latin florilegia has been hampered by traditional philological methods, but he cites The Manipulus flororum Project and its auxiliary digital resources as a unique approach for overcoming this “barrier” (“Por el momento solo los proyectos de Nighman ofrecen una acción sistemática para supercar esta barrera”: p.270, n.1). He also cites three of Nighman’s published articles on the Manipulus, and reports that by using the Janus Intertextuality Search Engine he determined that Juan Murmelio’s poem contains 32 quotations that are also found in the Manipulus, mostly in the lemma Mulier (p.275, n.8).

William O. Duba (2017). The forge of doctrine: the academic year 1330-31 and the rise of Scotism at the University of Paris, Studia sententiarum 2, Turnhout: Brepols.

Cites The Electronic Manipulus flororum website, noting its use in two sermons by William of Brienne (pp.224, n.14; 228-32). Named entries from the Manipulus include Anima a, Fides siue fidelitas b, Predicacio f, Gloria eterna r, Scriptura sacra ag, as well as six other entries from Scriptura sacra. Also reports its reception in a sermon by Bertrand de la Tour (p.231).

Chris L. Nighman (2017). “Editorial agency in the Manipulus flororum: Thomas of Ireland’s reception of two works by Peter of Blois,” in From learning to love: schools, law, and pastoral care in the Middle Ages – Essays in honour of Joseph W. Goering, T. Sharp et al. (eds.), Papers in Mediaeval Studies 29, Toronto: PIMS Publications, 224-48.

Examines Thomas’ reception of Peter of Blois’ De amicitia from the Flores paradisi (BnF MS lat. 15928) and the Epistolae from Thomas’ own manuscript copy of the original source (BnF MS lat. 16714) and also from the Flores paradisi, and notes that an unidentified intermediate source must have been used by Thomas as his source for certain excerpts from Peter’s letters that are not found in either of those manuscripts; includes a list of 59 quotations that contain lines from Peter of Blois, most of which are misattributed in the Manipulus to Petrus Rauennas or other authors.

Tomasz Nastulczyk (2017). “Manipulus flororum Tomasza z Irlandii w środowisku krakowskich bernardynów (XV w.). Recepja florilegium jako świadectwo transferu wartości teologicznych i moralnych Poręczny zbiór wypisów czy narzędzie formacji duchowej,” [“Thomas of Ireland’s Manipulus flororum in the community of Bernardines (Franciscan Observants) of 15th-century Krakow: the reception of the florilegium as a testimony of the transfer of moral and theological values,”] in Miedzy teologią a duszpasterstwem powszechnym na ziemiach Korony doby przedtrydenckiej. Dziedzictwo Średniowiecza i wyzwania XV-XVI wieku [Between theology and popular ministry in the Kingdom of Poland in the Pre-Tridentine period: medieval heritage and the challenges of 15th and 16th centuries], W. Walecki (ed.), Warszawa, 327-60.

Cites The Electronic Manipulus flororum Project, the Rouses’ book, and various articles by Nighman, Cels, and McEvoy, in examining the lemma Paupertas in a manuscript copy of the Manipulus flororum now at the Biblioteka Jagiellońska in Krakow.

Clemens Weidmann (2017). “Zur Grauzone zwischen authentischen und inauthentischen Predigten des Augustinus,” in Praedicatio patrum: Studies on preaching in late antique North Africa, G. Partoens, A. Dupont and S. Boodts, Instrumenta Patristica et Mediaevalia 75, Ministerium Sermonis 3, Brepols, 135-167.

Cites The Electronic Manipulus flororum Project (p.137, n.8) in noting the presence of quotations attributed to Augustine that were derived from sources written after the completion of Manipulus (see below, Weidmann 2020).

Elizabeth Schirmer (2017). “Conversational Lollardy: Reading the Margins of MS Bodley 978,” Manuscript Studies: A Journal of the Schoenberg Institute for Manuscript Studies, 2.2, 328-68.

Cites The Electronic Manipulus florum Project for the entire lemma Crux (p.354, n.59).

Marian Toledo Candelaria (2018). “From reformed barbarian to ‘saint-king’: literary portrayals of King Malcolm III Canmore (r. 1058-93) in Scottish historical narratives, c.1100-1449,” PhD dissertation, University of Guelph.

Discusses Walter Bower’s reception of Inuidia u from the Manipulus in commenting on the bias of English chroniclers, including William of Malmesbury, in recounting Scottish history (pp.213-14).

Alexander W. Holland (2018). “John Bromyard’s Summa praedicantium: an exploration of late medieval falsity through a fourteenth-century preaching handbook,” PhD dissertation, University of Kent. (<https://kar.kent.ac.uk/68440/1/282Main%20Text.pdf>)

Makes extensive use of the online Manipulus florum edition, especially the appendix which contains Holland’s transcription (from BL MS Royal 7 E IV) and translation of Bromyard’s Prologus (pp.298-305), which cites 14 quotations from the Manipulus.

Dagmara Wójcik-Zega & Włodzimierz Zega (2018). “Bartłomiej z Jasła i „czeska devotio moderna” w Krakowie. Kazanie Hoc epulum comedas na Wielki Czwartek,” [“Bartholomew of Jasło and the “Bohemian devotio moderna” in Kraków: The Sermon Hoc epulum comedas for Maundy Thursday,”] Przegląd Tomistyczny 24, 135-90. (<https://www.latarnia.org.pl/kacik-czasopism/pt/files/pt2018.pdf>)

Cites The Electronic Manipulus florum Project (p.153, n.31) in demonstrating Bartholomew’s reception of the Manipulus for Eucharistia b, c, e, g, n, x; Caritas c; and Desiderium c in composing this sermon (pp.152-7), and cites the online edition for those passages in their critical edition of the sermon (pp.164-81).

Ann Astell & Joseph Wawrykow eds. (2018). Three Pseudo-Bernardine Works, Cistercian Studies 273, Cistercian Publications, Collegeville, Minn.

Cites The Electronic Manipulus florum Project in the bibliography (p.149), but it does not seem to be mentioned in the annotations to the translations of these three texts from the 12th and 13th centuries, suggesting that Janus was probably used as a tool for identifying the sources of quotations.

Vicent Martines (2018). “The initiation power of the Mediterranean Sea in Tirant lo Blach,” Imago temporis. Medium Aevum 11, 299-328.

Cites The Electronic Manipulus florum Project (p.325, n.55).

Chris L. Nighman (2019). “Walter Bower’s reception of the Manipulus florum (1306) in composing the Scotichronicon (c.1440),” The Innes Review 70.1, 55-64 (<https://www.euppublishing.com/doi/pdfplus/10.3366/inr.2019.0202>).

Demonstrates and analyzes Bower’s extensive use of the Manipulus in writing this major work of medieval Scottish historiography. The article provides many links to apparatus files from The Manipulus florum Project, and the online Appendix (not included in the print journal) has over 70 links to PDF fons/fontes documents provided on the Manipulus/Scotichronicon Project website ([https://www.euppublishing.com/doi/suppl/10.3366/inr.2019.0202/suppl_file/3%20NIGHMAN%20_SMO%20for%20online%20version%20INR70\[1\].pdf](https://www.euppublishing.com/doi/suppl/10.3366/inr.2019.0202/suppl_file/3%20NIGHMAN%20_SMO%20for%20online%20version%20INR70[1].pdf)).

Irene Verde del Pozo (2019). “El Amicitia de Cicerón en los florilegio medievales,” Estudios Clásicos 155/156, 103-18.

Cites The Electronic Manipulus florum Project (p.117) in discussing the transmission of quotations from Cicero’s De Amicitia in Manipulus (pp.110-12), Florilegium Gallicum, Florilegio Espiritual, and Flores philosophorum et poetarum.

David R. Carlson (2019). “Feriby’s ‘Lament for Richard II’ and English literary history ca.1400,” Chaucer Review 54:4, 373-410 (<https://muse.jhu.edu/article/734838/pdf>).

Cites The Electronic Manipulus florum Project in identifying Feriby’s reception of Presumptio t (p.407, n.12-18) and Tribulatio an (p.408, n.42-45), and possibly also Prelacio t (p.409, n.59) in Feriby’s Lament.

Jacqueline Hamesse, María-José Muñoz Jiménez, & Chris L. Nighman eds. (2019). New perspectives on Thomas of Ireland's Manipulus florum / Nouvelles perspectives sur le Manipulus florum de Thomas d'Irlande, Papers in Mediaeval Studies 32, Toronto: PIMS Publications.

The proceedings of the colloquium organized by Nighman and held at Wilfrid Laurier University, 16-17 May 2014, marking the 35th anniversary of the Rouses' seminal book on the Manipulus florum, with the support of the Research Office at Wilfrid Laurier University and the Social Sciences and Humanities Research Council of Canada. The bilingual Introduction by Dr. Muñoz Jiménez (pp.1-16) provides an overview of previous scholarship on Manipulus florum. Because the titles of the individual papers are closely descriptive of their contents, individual annotations are not provided:

- Chris L. Nighman. “Revisiting John of Wales’s role in the creation of the Manipulus florum” (pp.17-30).
- Mark Zier. “The place of the Glossa ordinaria in the Manipulus florum” (pp.31-72).
- Xavier Biron-Ouellet. “Quels mots pour exprimer l’émotion dans le Manipulus florum? Ce qu’ils nous disent sur son public et sa fonction” (pp.73-90).
- Robin Waugh. “Patience in the Manipulus florum” (pp.91-110).
- Iolanda Ventura. “Âme et Corps dans le Manipulus florum de Thomas d’Irlande” (pp.111-31).
- Louis Shwartz. “Thomas of Ireland’s construction of ‘Angelus’ and ‘Diabolus’ and the usefulness of the Manipulus florum” (pp.132-46).
- Tristan Sharp. “From the university to the cloister: The Manipulus florum and William of Pagula’s Speculum religiosorum” (pp.147-64).
- Alan Vinclette. “The lemmata ‘Amor’, ‘Caritas’, and ‘Dilectio’ in Thomas of Ireland’s Manipulus florum and their influence on renaissance mysticism” (pp.165-87).
- Nicholas Must. “What a Calvinist edition of the Manipulus florum provided to French Protestants: a reading of the lemma ‘Ecclesia’ in Stoer’s 1593 edition” (pp.188-206).
- María-José Muñoz Jiménez. “Les manuscrits du Manipulus florum conservés dans les bibliothèques espagnoles” (pp.207-23).

Misty Schieberle, ed. (2020). Christine de Pizan’s Advice for Princes in Middle English Translation: Stephen Scrope’s ‘The Epistle of Othea’ and the Anonymous ‘Litel Bibell of Knighthod’ (TEAMS Middle English Texts), Medieval Institute Publications.

Cites The Electronic Manipulus florum Project (pp.136, 478).

Gregorio Rodríguez Herrera (2020). “Los florilegios de autores Latinos y su estado actual: del manuscrito a los proyectos digitales,” Do Manuscrito ao Livro Impresso II, A.M. Lopes Andrade & M.C. Carrington eds., Universidade de Aveiro y Universidade de Coimbra, 131-74. https://doi.org/10.14195/978-989-26-2074-9_4

Describes The Electronic Manipulus florum Project (pp.156-7), and cites Nighman’s articles from 2002 (p.156, n.80), 2005 (p.148, n.58), 2011 (p.156, n.80), and 2014 (p.141, n.24), and also Tompa & Kane’s article from 2011 (p.156, n.80).

Clemens Weidmann (2020). “Creating a new Augustine from the Manipulus florum: Remarks on some sermons of the so-called Augustinus Belgicus,” in Flores Augustini, Augustinian florilegia in the Middle Ages, J. Delmalle, G. Partoens, S. Boodts and A. Dupont eds., Spicilegium Sacrum Lovaniense, Études et Documents, fasc. 57, 191-212.

Cites The Electronic Manipulus florum Project (p.192) and makes extensive use of the online edition in arguing that the collection of sermons attributed to Augustine and edited by A.B. Caillau and B. Saint-Yves in 1836-9, were composed in the mid-14th century by “Augustinus Belgicus”, and so could not have been a source for the Manipulus; rather, the Manipulus was a major source for the author who compiled those sermons. The article, building upon the author’s previous work (see Weidmann 2017) cites dozens of quotations from the Manipulus under a variety of lemmata. The publication of this article triggered a full revision of the fons primus files for the affected quotations, as credited on the Acknowledgments page.

Marjorie Burghart (2020). “Remploi textuel et fluidité de la materia predicibilis: le cas du Speculum prelatorum de William de Pagula (†1332),” Revue Mabillon n.s. 31, 109-47.

Cites The Electronic Manipulus flororum Project (p.119, n.51), which was employed to determine the early reception of the Manipulus in this text by William of Pagula. The author also cites the 2019 New Perspectives book (p.122, n.64).

Serena Masolini (2020). “Unity, authority, and ecclesiastical power: Augustinian echoes in the works of Jean Gerson at the Council of Constance,” The Catholic Historical Review 106.4, 509-50.

Cites The Electronic Manipulus flororum Project (p.546, n.114), which was used to determine that Gerson did not employ a copy of the Manipulus for his citations of Augustine in works written at Constance (p.547, n.117).

Lucie Doležalová (2021). “A ‘Book of knowledge’? The De tribus punctis Christianiae religionis (1316) by Thomas Hibernicus and its heyday in late medieval Bohemia,” in Books of Knowledge in Late Medieval Europe – Circulation and Reception of Popular Texts, P. Cermanová & V. Žurek eds. Utrecht Studies in Medieval Literacy, 52 (Turnhout: Brepols), 181-200.

Cites The Electronic Manipulus flororum Project and Nighman’s 2005 article (p.182, n.2) and 2014 & 2017 papers (p.182, n.6), and treats two quotations from the Manipulus: Doctrina ar (p.186, n.23) and Doctrina ax (p.187, n.27).

Pavel Tríška (2021). “Thomas d’Irlande: De tribus sensibus sacrae scripturae – editio princeps, commentaire et traduction,” MA thesis (Mémoire de Master), Univerzita Karova (Charles University), Prague. <https://docplayer.fr/216986053-Universite-charles-faculte-des-lettres-memoire-de-master-bc-pavel-triska.html>

Cites Nighman’s 2005 and 2014 articles repeatedly (starting on p.13, n.21 & p.14, n.33) and The Electronic Manipulus flororum Project several times (starting with p.15, n.38), and treats two quotations from the Manipulus: Scriptura sacra bm (p.38, n.169) and Discere l (p.39, n.170).

Ralph Hanna III (2021). “Lost libraries: the case of the Oxford Franciscans, c. 1330-1340,” Journal of the Early Book Society for the Study of Manuscripts and Printing History 24, 27-47.

Cites The Electronic Manipulus flororum Project (pp.42-3, n.16) as the research tool used to determine John Ridewall’s reception of the Manipulus in composing Fulgentius metaforalis at Oxford during the 1330s, including Amicicia ai, Consideratio sui af, ag & ah, Iustitica et iustus y, Loquacitas t, Prelacio bl, and Veritas ad (p.31), as well as Pacienza am, an, ao (p.43, n.18).

Lucie Doležalová, with Michal Dragoun & Kimberly Rivers (2021). Passionate copying in late medieval Bohemia: The case of Crux de Telcz (1434-1504), Prague Medieval Studies 1, Prague: Karolinum Press.

Cites The Electronic Manipulus flororum Project and several articles included in this bibliography (pp.79-80, n.185), as well as Disciplina f (p.207, n.136).

Marijim Thoene & Guy Mermier, trans. (2022). End of time in the Middle Ages: an English translation of “The Vineyard of our Saviour,” Bodleian MS. Douce 134, Ann Arbor, Michigan: Maize Books, 2022. <https://doi.org/10.3998/mpub.11767532>

Acknowledges The Electronic Manipulus flororum Project (p.7) and cites it for Gloria eterna ao (p.383, n.105), Gloria eterna an (pp.391-2, n.22), and for three unnamed quotations (p.146, n.5; p.302, n.62; p.468, n.4).

Richard A.J. Mutton (2022). “Aristotelian and other auctoritates in the works of Enrique de Villena, and their possible sources,” Cambridge University dissertation.
<https://api.repository.cam.ac.uk/server/api/core/bitstreams/0a8656c0-c78a-4eac-aa0f-7ab93b23d994/content>

Cites Nighman’s translation of Thomas’ Preface to the Manipulus from The Electronic Manipulus flororum Project website (p.47, n.106), and also cites the website for its provision of transcriptions of three works by John of Wales (p.61, n.155, p.225 & p.227).

Alasdair A. MacDonald and J. Craig McDonald (2022), William Touris OFM, The Contemplacioun of Synnaris: Late-medieval advice to a prince, Studies in Medieval and Reformation Traditions, 232/12. Leiden: Brill.

Cites Manipulus florum (p.51) as an intermediate source for “nearly 75” quotations in this late 15th-century example of the Speculum principis genre. Manipulus is cited over 100 times in the section devoted to “Sources of the Sententiae” (pp.375-434). The editors do not cite The Electronic Manipulus florum Project, but they surely must have used it.

Chris L. Nighman (2023). “The lemma De predicatoribus in Iacobus de Benevento’s Viridarium consolationis: an unexpected preaching tract in a Dominican florilegium,” Medieval Sermon Studies 67: 19-28. https://scholars.wlu.ca/hist_faculty/29/

Cites The Electronic Manipulus florum Project (p.19, n.2) and Nighman’s 2005 article (p.19, n.2 & p.25, n.27).

Marjorie Burghart (2023). “Looking through the preacher’s kaleidoscope: Digital humanities and the study of intertextuality in preaching material (13th-15th c.)” (hal-04259105). <https://hal.science/hal-04259105/document>

Cites The Electronic Manipulus florum Project and the 2019 New Perspectives book (p.2, n.4).

Barry Taylor (2023). “Reflections on the circulation of wisdom literature in late medieval Aragon and Castile,” Mot So Razo 22: 25-38.

https://doi.org/10.33115/udg_bib/msr.v22i0.23001

Cites The Electronic Manipulus florum Project and the 2019 New Perspectives book (p.36).

Ralph Hanna III (2024). “Graham Pollard and ‘Oxford Peciae’: False starts and discoveries,” The Library 25.3: 289-312.

Cites The Electronic Manipulus florum Project, generously characterizing the online edition as “brilliant” (p.304, n.35).

Chris L. Nighman (2024). “The reception of Manipulus florum in two distinct works by Johannes von Dambach OP: Consolatio theologiae and Consolatorium theologicum,” Archivum Fratrum Praedicatorum n.s. 9 (forthcoming).

Cites The Electronic Manipulus florum Project and the Janus Intertextuality search engine, as well as 12 entries in Manipulus, including Abstinencia h, ai and al; Ieiunium b, g, m, n (1), u, x, y, am; and Prosperitas y.